

PORTER TELLS OF HIS SON'S TREATS.

Testifies That Strong Efforts Were Made to Prevent His Marriage.

Louis, the Millionaire Declares, Said He Would Put Him in a Madhouse.

The Son Wrote to a Doctor Telling Him His Father Had Strange Hallucinations.

STORMY INTERVIEW IN NEW YORK.

The Aged Lover's Children Tried to Force Him to Sign a Paper Agreeing Not to Wed Miss Earle—A Coachman's Testimony.

Bridgeport, Conn., Dec. 8.—The Porter-Ritch case, in which the millionaire is suing for the return of his property, was before the Superior Court today, this being the fourth week. Mr. Porter was again the principal witness, and he was evidently in better health on the previous occasion. Mr. Porter testified that he had written to his family physician as to the advisability of his marrying again. The letter was written at the request of his sons, who, however, objected to him to him that was deeply in love with him. I interviewed her, and gave her to understand that if she married my father I would institute legal proceedings in regard to my father's sanity. This scared her off, although my father did not cease writing to her for some time. At the same time he was writing letters proposing marriage to two other women. One of them refused, and is therefore out of the question; the other is a regular adventuress, sent here by a discredited clergyman, a friend of my father, and who seems to have been in love with him. I discovered that he was on the point of marrying her, and interfered, and at least postponed the affair (about July 1, 1900).

Dear Sir, Cutler—My father this morning read to me his letter to you and your reply on the subject of his remarriage. It seems evident to me that you do not fully understand the condition of affairs, and I am about to trespass so far on your time as to lay before you a few facts and then ask you whether, in your opinion, his proposed step would be good or ill.

About six months ago I discovered that my father was engaged to a woman who swore to him that she was deeply in love with him. I interviewed her, and gave her to understand that if she married my father I would institute legal proceedings in regard to my father's sanity. This scared her off, although my father did not cease writing to her for some time. At the same time he was writing letters proposing marriage to two other women. One of them refused, and is therefore out of the question; the other is a regular adventuress, sent here by a discredited clergyman, a friend of my father, and who seems to have been in love with him. I discovered that he was on the point of marrying her, and interfered, and at least postponed the affair (about July 1, 1900).

My father thinks that these women really love him and were merely trying to get a cent to his name. Every one here agrees with me, that such an idea is utterly foolish, but it is most firmly rooted in my father's mind. If he should marry any such person all of his family would refuse to recognize him, and we would either institute proceedings to have him confined in a madhouse or leave him.

Mr. Porter's Testimony. "Shortly after writing the letter," said Mr. Porter, in his testimony today, "my two sons, Louis and Blatchley, had an interview with me at the Plaza Hotel, New York, when they demanded I should sign an agreement that I would not marry, which, upon my refusing, Louis said he would give me twenty-four hours to sign, and unless I signed, legal proceedings would be instituted to put me in a madhouse. I said such things cannot be done, but Louis replied, 'In these days there are ways that you know nothing about. Everything can be arranged before the case comes into court, and then you cannot escape from an asylum.'"

"The document he wanted me to sign was as follows: 'I hereby agree to give up all intentions of remarriage, and to act as correspondent with Miss Earle and Rev. Mr. McNellie. I also agree to send weekly to school. I also agree to have Mrs. Hudson to the house for the winter.'"

"After this," said Mr. Porter, "I had a talk with Louis and Blatchley, in which I said there was nothing left for me but to leave Blatchley Lodge. I said to the boys: 'I cherish no feelings of hostility. Disparagement as you may conceive me to be, you have come under the tuition of T. G. Hitch.'"

"After this interview with his son, Mr. Porter prepared a letter to his children, stating that he had decided to marry Miss Earle, as she is as nearly fit as she can be to all the places occupied by his mother."

"The father said: 'Do not show such dissipation.' He replied that it was not dissipation—it was hatred, Louis added."

"Three times a day I pray to God to curse you. Now if you want war, you shall have it. Then both left the house, and went to the house of Schuyler Merritt. This interview was Sunday afternoon, September 10, 1896."

Conchman on the Stand. Edward John Conchman, for fourteen years, testified that Mr. Porter treated him well, and that he had never seen anything that would indicate that Mr. Porter was ever insane. He always knew what he was about.

Mr. Porter was arrested, Mr. Essenden requested me to come to his office. There were several present, including Mr. Porter, Mr. Ritch and two doctors. Mr. Essenden asked me if I could swear that Mr. Porter was insane. I said I could not.

In cross-examination the witness failed to contradict himself.

BIRD SHOT KILLED HIM. Marozzi, Accidentally Shot by His Guide, Dies After a Week of Suffering.

Peter Marozzi, a salesman, thirty-eight years old, of Upper Montclair, N. J., died at the Hudson Street Hospital yesterday morning, after a week of suffering.

While hunting a week ago near Orange, he was accidentally shot by his guide. One birdshot entered the right eye and penetrated to the brain, and this caused his death. He was brought to this city yesterday.

X RAYS LOCATE A BULLET. Bellevue Surgeons Delighted with Their Operation on Joseph Butler.

Joseph Butler, who was shot in the arm by a policeman on November 3 while resisting arrest, and who was afterward taken to Bellevue, was yesterday removed to the amphitheater at Bellevue, where, by means of the X rays, the bullet was easily located and extracted.

The surgeons are highly elated over the successful employment of the surgical searchlight, and it is probable that Bellevue will, before long, be supplied with an X-ray apparatus. They think that Butler will be all right again in a few days.

INDORSE THE TUNNEL.

Board of Aldermen Resolve to Confer with the Park Board About "Dead Man's Curve."

To hasten the abolition of "Dead Man's Curve," at Broadway and Fourteenth street, the Board of Aldermen yesterday adopted this report:

CHARLES A. PARKER, ANDREW J. BROWN, BENJAMIN E. HALL, ELIAS GOODMAN, JOHN J. MURPHY, JR., N. T. BROWN, FRANK L. MARSHALL.

The object of a conference with the Park Board is to secure its assent to tunnel under Union Square in accordance with the plans presented by the Journal recently.

NO NEW MOTOR ON THE "L."

Introduction of Pintsch Gas System Settles the Question.

The directors of the Manhattan Elevated Railway Company met at noon yesterday and declared the usual quarterly dividend of 1 1/2 per cent. The statement for the present quarter, ending December 31, shows an increase up to date of $43,000.

The action of the Executive Committee in adopting the Pintsch gaslight system for their cars was ratified by the directors, and the work of equipping the cars with the new system of electric lighting was approved. Secretary McWilliams said after the meeting that the company was in earnest about the work as rapidly as possible.

The question of new and improved motor cars was discussed in a general way, but no official action was taken.

It is believed that the decision to equip the cars with Pintsch gaslights will settle the question of electric lighting for a long time. Electricity, if adopted, would provide both motive power and light. The expense of putting in gaslights is too great to be quickly thrown aside for electricity.

To Revise Drawback Regulations. John M. Costello, Chief of Customs of Washington, has begun in this city an investigation of the drawback regulations to ascertain if they are in accordance with the provisions of the Government, and also with the view of revising them. The rules have not been altered since 1892.
